

Remedies for Victims of Employment Violations

MCCR enforces orders against those found to be unlawfully discriminating (the Respondent), such as by levying fines and damages, and taking other appropriate actions where warranted (example: requiring training).

Retaliation is Illegal

How Does The Law Protect Me?

Every Marylander is guaranteed equal opportunity in receiving employment and in all labor management-union relations regardless of race, sex, age, national origin, religion, physical or mental disability, color, marital status, sexual orientation, gender identity, or genetic information.

Employment Discrimination

"It is the policy of the State, in the exercise of its police power for the protection of the public safety, public health, and general welfare, for the maintenance of business and good government, and for the promotion of the State's trade, commerce, and manufacturers to assure all persons equal opportunity in receiving employment and in all labor management-union relations, regardless of race, color, religion, ancestry or national origin, sex, age, marital status, sexual orientation, gender identity, or disability unrelated in nature and extent so as to reasonably preclude the performance of the employment; and to that end, to prohibit discrimination in employment by any person."
State Government Article, §20-602, Annotated Code of Maryland

What Am I Protected From?

You are protected from unlawful discrimination in the following employment-related practices:

- Employers cannot discriminate in recruiting, hiring, upgrading/promoting, setting work conditions, and discharging an employee.
- Labor organizations cannot deny membership to qualified persons or discriminate in apprenticeship programs.
- Employment agencies cannot discriminate in job referrals, ask discriminatory pre-employment questions, or circulate information that unlawfully limits employment.
- Newspapers and other media cannot publish job advertisements that discriminate.

MCCR also investigates allegations of and protects employees from harassment by colleagues and superiors.

Pregnant & Working?

If you are pregnant, you have a legal right to request a reasonable workplace accommodation if your pregnancy causes or contributes to a disability and the accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on your employer.
State Government Article, §20-609(b)

Every situation is different. An employer is permitted to request certification from your health care provider regarding the medical advisability of a reasonable accommodation, but only to the same extent certification is required for other temporary disabilities. If required, the certification must include:

The law lists an assortment of options for both you and your employer to consider in order to comply with such a request. These include, but are not limited to:

- Changing job duties.
- Changing work hours.
- Relocation.
- Providing mechanical or electrical aids.
- Transfer to less strenuous or less hazardous positions.
- Providing leave.

- Date a reasonable accommodation is medically advisable.
- Probable duration of the accommodation.
- Explanation as to the medical advisability of the reasonable accommodation.
